ENFORCE TRAFFIC LAWS

The situation is fast coming to a head in Bay St. Louis concerning traffic violations and this is as it should be. Private citizens, becoming fed up with the attitude of our officials in general, are taking matters in their own hands. Some of our officials and law-enforcement officers are trying their best to take corrective methods where speeders are concerned. We were at the meeting of the Board of Supervisors recently when Sheriff Johnson asked for speed limit signs to be posted about the county and city. He pointed out the fact that speed limits could hardly be enforced if they were not posted. Much cooperation was promised; discussions ensued as to the type of signs needed, where they should be posted, and of material they should be made. Seemingly that ended it!

Many citizens have written to this paper asking assistance or some display on this sore situation. We are in complete accord with their argument that "something has got to be done—and now!" Not after someone has been killed!

During this summer season when our town is crowded with visitors we should enforce our laws to the fullest on these traffic violations. Youngsters, (yes and even local grown-up) have been guilty of breaking every city ordinance on driving we have on our books—parking, running stop signs, speeding and even worse violations have gone unpunished—even when the guilty parties were brought to trial. WHY!

Complete disregard for our local law is evident as in one case where youths, passing along the beach business section, tossed and broke bottles at the feet of members of our Police Force. They remained unpunished because "it was their first offense." Breaking the law is a crime—These kids broke the law!

Cars have been estimated traveling along North Beach at 70-75 miles per hour. Just what is the speed limit there? How would anyone know what it is—There are no signs? But even so, any normal person who is mentally capable of driving a car should know that 70 miles an hour is no safe speed to be driving through a residential section.

Officers are supposed to enforce traffic laws the same as a person is hired by a private concern to do a job. Do we have to wait until someone has been killed before we force compliance with our laws? It may be your child!

LETTERS

NOTICE TO THE PEOPLE OF BAY ST. LOUIS

There are about twenty children living in the area of Breath's Lane in the 600 Block of North Beach. Despite repeated warnings of the authorities our good citizens will persist in treating this area as a proving ground for the speed limits of their cars. Today, July 11, 1951, my son, Mike, 6-years-old narrowly escaped being run down and killed by one of these speed-hounds while crossing from his home area to the beach.

These children are in their rights in crossing this public street to the beach. All twenty of them—the average age is about 2 years of age. They are to be looked after at this age—NOT LOOKED OVER. My boy is my life—You will grant my child the same consideration I grant yours. When you endanger my boy's life through carelessness and speeding in that area where it is a known fact that many young children bathe and play you whoever you are, are going to answer to me—I am tired and fed up at asking for the consideration due these children—give it from now on—OR ELSE!

DRAFT OF 717 DOCTORS DUE THIS MONTH

Washington selective draft board has called up this month's draft of 717 physicians for the armed services.

Although the physicians have been notified to report for induction, they still can apply voluntarily for commissions. It added that the 717 notified to report in July must do so even if a considerable number of other physicians should volunteer. It said voluntary applications for commissions might cut the first draft among 717 who were called up this month's draft of 717 physicians for the armed services.

Physicians were notified for the Army and Navy. Physicians not now in military service are urged to apply for commissions. Selection board will those who are in military service. Bay St. Louis, Mississippi, July 11, 1951.

Gov. Fielding Wright flew to the Coast from Jackson, and presided in a successful all-day peace meeting attended by rivarly factions. The talks ended with approximately 100 fishermen from the Carolina, Texas, Louisiana and Florida joining the Gulf Coast Shrimpers and Oystermen's Association (GASO) and agreeing to work under its rules and prices. This settled the dispute. The pickets were withdrawn and weary negotiators went home.

Before the 1946 Mississippi shrimpers had been allowed to fish in Louisiana waters under a reciprocal agreement by paying the same fee as that paid by Louisiana fishermen.

In that year the Louisiana Legislature reduced the area in which Mississippi shrimpers could operate to one-fifth its former size and added a $2,500 boat license and $250 a man crew license which made it economically impossible for Mississippians to compete.

But Mississippi still allowed Louisiana fishermen to play its Gulf Coast waters.

Howard McDonnell, Biloxi attorney representing the Biloxi pickers as well as the Shrimpers Union, told Gov. Wright "this thing (the dispute) is going on until they comply with our policy... there isn't going to be any rough stuff, just peaceful picketing, which we have the right to do."

McDonnell added that he felt "if these Louisiana people come in here they ought to do what the Mississippians do."

McDonnell commenting on Pascagoula's shrimp industry said: "Over here (in Pascagoula) where they have no union as yet x x x they are able to use cheaper labor. They are violating every child labor law on the book x x x working 10, 11, and 12-year old children. That is not done in Biloxi."

At several points during the meeting the representatives hinted of a competitive squabble between the infant shrimp industry at Pascagoula and the established industry at Biloxi. Gov. Wright emerged from the meeting and said it appeared that no settlement could be reached. He said he would bring in 400 National Guardsmen to Pascagoula before he left.

Later, however, the representatives came to terms.

Congressional Highlights

by
CONGRESSMAN WM. M. COLLIER

LEGISLATIVE LOG-JAM

Federal Government operates on a basis of July 1st. Under the law, the various departments of Government are required to spend money or conduct business after July 1st of each year. Ordinarily, Congress passes the appropriation bills for the various agencies of government before July 1st but this year, after Congress has been in session for some months, due to the Korean war, various legislative incidents have delayed the passage of the appropriation bill that has come before the House and the Senate. The House has passed the bill but the Senate has not yet acted on it. The House has passed the bill but the Senate has not yet acted on it. The House has passed the bill but the Senate has not yet acted on it.

old method of passing a continuing resolution. This resolution authorizes the departments to function normally for an additional thirty days, by which time the necessary appropriation bills have to be passed or another similar resolution passed.

CONTROLS

Again due to the controversy being waged in the Congress and throughout the country over the subject of controls the Congress finds itself in the same position with reference to controls as it had with the appropriations. In other words, the control law which was passed by the Congress last fall expired on July 1st. The Senate, by remaining in session all of Thursday night, finally passed its version of this highly controversial subject. The House Banking and Currency Committee, after wrangling over the Administration's bill for some two months, finally reported out its bill on Monday of last week. Both the House and the Senate versions are themselves amendments to the original law. The House version reached the floor by the middle of the week, but it soon became apparent that the controversy over roll backs and other features of the bill would make it impossible to pass the House bill and then get the House bill and the Senate bill in conference and finally report and signed by the President before the Saturday night deadline. Therefore, the House shelved its bill and passed a continuing resolution which would extend the present law for thirty days. But the House resolution also provided for a ban on further roll backs or other action by the administration pending the final enactment of the new law. In all of this confusion, the question of a possible truce in Korea played a prominent part.

Our own position on this matter is as it has been from its inception. First, we do not believe that there is going to be any retreat by Russia. If the Korean situation is settled, Russia will, at the appropriate time, start something somewhere else. Inflation is still our greatest enemy and we should have across the board controls. Last December when this matter was up for consideration, I stated in the debate in part as follows:

"... As distasteful as controls are to a free people we must become realistic and provide for all-out controls of our economy. We should see to it that these controls are across the board, remembering our experience in the last two wars, that one segment of the economy cannot be controlled without the other. Wages, prices, and inflation must be controlled. We know that wage controls are not looked upon with favor by this administration, but I repeat that one commodity cannot be controlled and the other left untouched. If the administration does not see fit to use the machinery which the Congress has authorized for that purpose, then we can mandatorily provide for such controls."

Pedestrian Protection

Jay-walking doesn't save time. You usually get stranded in mid-street trying to buck traffic. It isn't worth the risk you run of being hit. So cross only with the green traffic light, advises the American Automobile Association. If there are pedestrian signals wait for the "Walk" signal. You get there just as fast — and more safely.

A florist will never depend on one flower garden, or one hothouse—or any single source of supply—if he hopes to have flowers when his customers want them.

It's the same way in the natural gas business. We must be ready every day—with gas available to meet the requirements of more than 400,000 customers...and with supplies to meet the demands of our future customers here in the Gulf South.

Hundreds of wells in scores of fields furnish gas to our system. These are dependable sources of supply for today, tomorrow, and for the years to come.
